RAGS AND RAG PICKERS.

WHERE WORN RUBBERS, OLD TINS, RAGS AND WHAT NOT GO.

Visit to a Warehouse Reaped with Pickings of All Kinds-Sorters and Their Deftness-A Pile of Old Rul bers and

'Twas in my golden age of childhood that there lived, if, indeed, she does not yet, a bent and withered woman, wrinkled as China crepe and merry as a lark's song. Methinks 'tis as far back as the third time the pussy willows purred for me when first I heard her shrill, cheery call, "Raks, raks!" From then till I was "quite a bik gerl, missey," old Mary was a welcome arrival upon the domestic scene. I was reminded of old Mary the other day by seeing a woman walking briskly under a heavy sack of rags. It was sunny, I was strolling insensibly and followed her. She entered a warehouse heaped with pickings of all kinds; after hesitating a moment I did the same. Things seemed novel, so when the proprietor looked at me in rather a surprised manner, I explained I d like to add to my slim stock of information re-garding rags and rag pickers. Whereat the clerk inquired interestedly, "Are you the woman who writes?" and a rag peddler who had just dropped in leaned up against the wall and gazed at me fixedly, and with much the same expression as wear in viewing a freak in the dime

"Oh, it's a great business," he remarked —I mean the proprietor—as he glanced over some letters before conducting me over the establishment, "if it weren't for rags there would be no paper, you would have no Bible, no romance, no-love letters," he added in quite a courtly manner.
Of all the queer places, that warehouse!
I clambered over the foot hills of rags, separated by valleys rich with old iron, zinc sheets, lead piping, brass wire, and my eye rested upon Acctic mountains in the background, perhaps I should say mountains of arctics. It seemed I touched rudely upon professional pride when I asked if that immense bulk and the many bales for shipping were brought in by rag pickers. I was informed that rag pickers are those that go about the streets and alleys or beg rags, which they usually sail to small merchants. Then there are rag to small merchants. peddlers who own wagons and go about among houses buying what they wish; merchants buying from both these classes, and himself, buying mostly from them.

I asked the proprietor what under the canopy he does with all this truck, and was told be had contracts with large factories all over the country. Old metals are returned to foundries; paper and rags to paper mills, and also ropes, which are used for manilla paper; vinegar and oil barrels to be refilled; bits of leather and old boots to soap factories, where the grease is extracted for soap for my elegant ladies' white hands; old bones to sugar refineries, where, calcined, they purify sugar and syrup, or bones may be shipped for fortilizing. Old bottles are returned to brewers, etc., new cloth rags from tailors back to cloth factories, and rubber, "gums" as the Anglomaniacs term them, to the factory in Massachusetts.

That pile of rubbers and arctics reaching to the ceiling did look odd. There were tiny baby arctics and large scows stranded side by side; those exasperating run-down-at-the-heel rubbers which peo-ple had lost in the street and plenty which You've walked from many directions, through many paths, upon feet shod in righteonsness and those taking hold on hell, haven't you! They present a good illustration of reincarnation doctrines, they will be rid of the useless parts and the impurity and their best parts sent to the factory, whence they will shortly is-sue again, shining and new.

I always used to deprecate throwing arctics, etc. into the alleys, but now l shall do all in my power to assist these rag pickers to a plentiful spring crop. They receive four cents a pound for them; besides, quite a number of boys and girls get employment in cutting off the rubber. It's queer, baing them. Hundreds of them are flung into a huge box lined with on a windlass-this may not be enough, but that's what it looks like. When the box was opened. I saw the rubbers had been pressed out of all semblance. The proprietor took me to another ware-house where the rags were being sorted.

A long room was bordered with deep boxes, in shape and size like tables, with bottoms of sieves for the dirt to sift through. On either side stood women rapidly sorting them, and unerringly flinging the rags into various barrels round about. They were calico gowns reaching to their feet, and kurchiefs on their heads, to protect themselves from the dust. They didn't seem to be paying any attention to whether rags were linen, woolen, mixed, what not. I asked one of them how she tells. "By the feeling. We scarcely ever stop to tear it. We get so that we can tell anything by touching it, even with our eyes shut. "Easy learnt? Well, for those as has the knack. Some girls pick it up in a couple of weeks, some never can learn it. Oh, it isn't disagree ble work when you're used to it. Most rags is pretty clean. Some, "she pointed to a bin. It gave new meaning to men's righteousness being like "fifthy rags."—"A. E. P." in Pioneer furnace cost $7 a ton. The sash weights produced are of a superior quality. The business is, like the case of old rubber, an illustration of the use of waste material. The tin can companies and other manufacturers of tin goods formerly dumped hundreds of tons into space, but now these scraps are utilized, and their respon-sible small boy works the ash fields to his profit in companionship with the blithe-some goat.—Commercial Bulletin.

For Recording an Earthquake. The model of an earthquake is a unique piece of apparatus that has been constructed by a Tokio seismologist. Patiently and laboriously following out the accurate records of a modern seismo-graph, Professor Sekiya has succeeded in shaping a long coil of copper wire so as to represent, with the utmost precision, the intricate path described by a shaken spot of the earth's surface. The model magnifies fifty times the ground's absolute motion during seventy-two sec-onds, and resembles a ball of twine unwound and thrown down in a confused of the shock for each second of time .-

Happy and Home Loving French. I assert that, to those who will look at I assert that, to those who will look at us without bias, we must appear in our true light the happiest and most home loving people among modern nations. That provincial life in France is narrow. have admitted, but what a very dove cote is almost every little home! If the time to be happy is now, and the way to be so is to make all those around us happy, then are we the most envisible people on earth, for we put that theory into practice. In what other land will you find so many bouseholds whose mem-bers are of three or four generations?

Parents and children cling together to the exclusion of all the world outside. Not a boy is brought up with a view to emigration. The thought of the roung birds leaving the nest is dreaded. I know girls who have refused splendid offers of marriage and preferred humbler ones because the latter gave them a chance of living near papa and mamma, and parents who have put themselves to any amount of in-convenience to make room for daughters-in-law rather than part with their sons.

A French father would think you mad If you told him that you left your family at 7 in the morning to return to them at 7 or 8 in the evening, as so many Americans do; and that on Sunday, your only day at home, you were too exhausted to enjoy your children's prattle or to take a walk with your wife. The little French provinctal tradesman, who locks his shop door while be spends a joyful hour at din ner with his family, has come nearer solving the problem of happiness than the Anglo-Saxon jockey in the race for ducats. -Max O'Beil in The Cosmopolitan.

Fire department horses in the big cities are, as a rule, ravenous feeders. There are certain hours of the day when they are fed, and the horse soon comes to know the feeding hours as well as the hostlers. As early as 5:30 o'clock in the merning is outs feeding time. If the feeder happens to be a little slow in getting down stairs, if he is only two minutes late, there is the greatest tramping of hoofs on the wooden floors, kicking the sides of the stalls and the wickedest champing of bridle bits ever seen or heard in a stable. This sort of racket is kept up continuously, too, until the oats are divided out for the meal.

The moment they commence feeding, if an alarm comes in every horse in the house will leave his oats and take his place under the swinging harness, and will impatiently dance around anxious to get off for a run. The fire department horse is, I believe, the only one that will leave his cats voluntarily to go to work.

ways take the bits out of the mouths or the horses at feeding time. This is done to give the animal a chance to thoroughly mesticate his food. The horse that eats with the bit in his mouth soon loses his appetite from indigestion, and will not last long in the department.-Fire Chief in Globe-Democrat.

The fires of love are often as effectually quenched by one rash dip and the troubled mind as speedily restored to a healthy condition,

A sharp eyed little man attracted the writer's attention in a Chicago hotel by the close watch he maintained at the dinner table upon the jaws of the other gueets. This little man picks up a great many ets of false teeth in the course of a year. Most persons that have a set before they reach 80 years of age are obliged to buy two more sets, at least, before they reach 60 years, and the mouth changes so that teeth that fit well and serve their wearer well at first after a while do not fit and cause the wearer a great deal of discom-fort. The man that makes a living in this line has acquired a great knack for discovering ill fitting teeth, and he scarcely ever fails to secure a bargain, for notwith standing failse teeth are the only immortal material about our bodies, inasmuch as they are said to be capable of resisting 4,000 of heat (Fahrenheit), very few people know that they are worth anything second hand, and so the little man gets them at his own figure.

He told the writer that many sets of false teeth are found. Owners are more careless of them than is supposed, and in stances are more frequent than would be imagined in which they have been left in hotal bedrooms. They have been found in railroad cars and even in horse cars, and quite frequently turn up in cabs. As the cabbles and railroad employes cannot wear other people's teeth they bunt up the buyer, and he gets the set for a few shillings. The scavengers sometimes rake up a set in an ash barrel, and sets are some times picked up in the streets. One set was found in a magpie's nest in Pennsyl-vania, and another was picked out of a woman's throat by a surgeon. The patient would never wear them again, and they were sold for a song. The little man picks up a nice living by his purchases, adding to it now and then by buying a second hand wig or two. New York
